

1. Description:

In this project, I am going to make webpages for a coffee business called Koko coffee. This company provides high quality organic coffee beans from Asia. Koko coffee is looking to promote their product as a coffee bean supplier to coffee stores like Starbucks and Tim Hortons with long-term contracts and large amount of coffee bean orders.

3. Feature:

In this project, I want to divide my content into sections on the webpage. Viewers can get a decent understanding of products from Koko coffee.

From business perspective, the webpage will allow the viewers to look at the introduction of the company itself, the upside or advantage of the products and what Koko coffee wants to archive. It also gives viewers photos of the products and all companies that has partnered with Koko coffee.

From technical perspective, I would have a navbar that lead the viewers to each section and page of the webpage. At the beginning of the webpage, there will be a jumbotron that has a photo showcase as background. Follow up, I well have serval sections that each descripts the highlight of product of Koko coffee. At the end of the webpage, viewers can see all companies that have partnered with Koko coffee, and it will give a button that leads to the second page, which would be two tables that the viewers can use to make order of coffee beans as individuals, or send information for further partnership as a company.
